

Who are the faces behind these menacing masks? Only America's favorite crime-fighter knows...

CALLING DICK

IT'S turning into one of Hollywood's biggest guessing games — just who are those men behind the rubber masks?

When Warren Beatty's labor of love, Dick Tracy, is released next month, there will be several characters in the movie not identified in the final screen credits.

While nobody will go on record, the showbusiness bible, Variety newspaper, has reported three of the masked men are Hollywood heavyweights Al Pacino, Dustin Hoffman and James Caan.

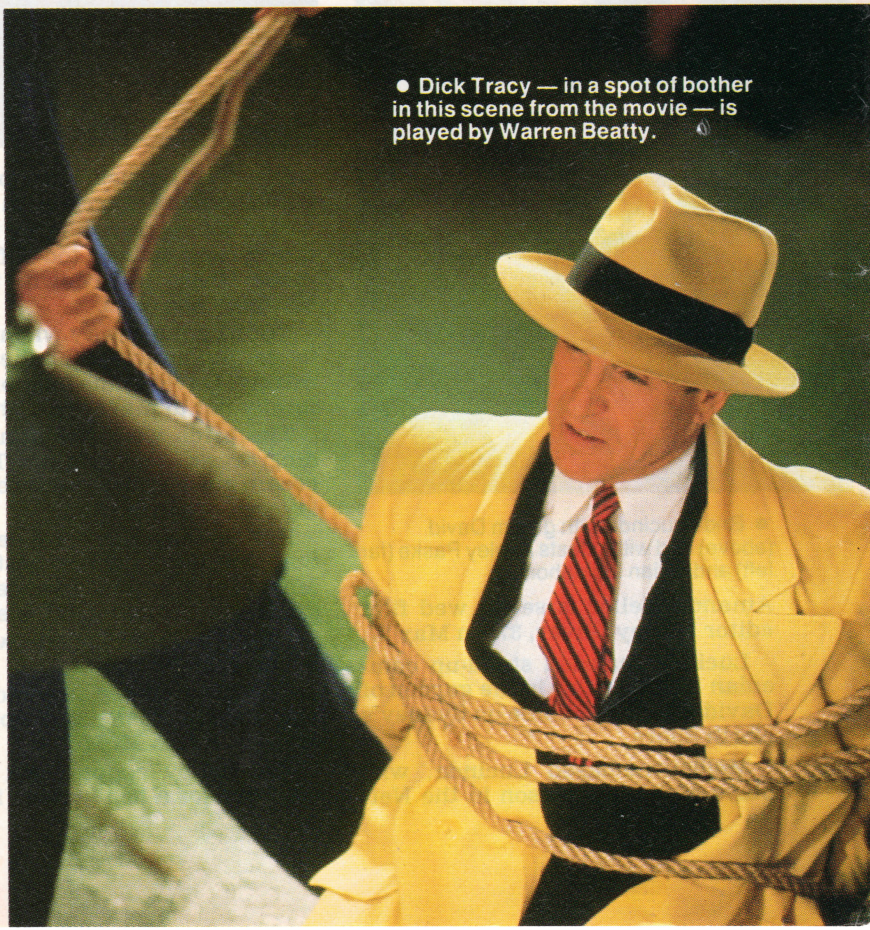

Other sources have hinted that Jack Nicholson and David Bowie are behind two of the masks.

It's doubtful that anyone will ever be told officially, since that's the gentlemen's agreement Beatty is reported to have with his famous friends, but it will certainly keep the fans guessing!

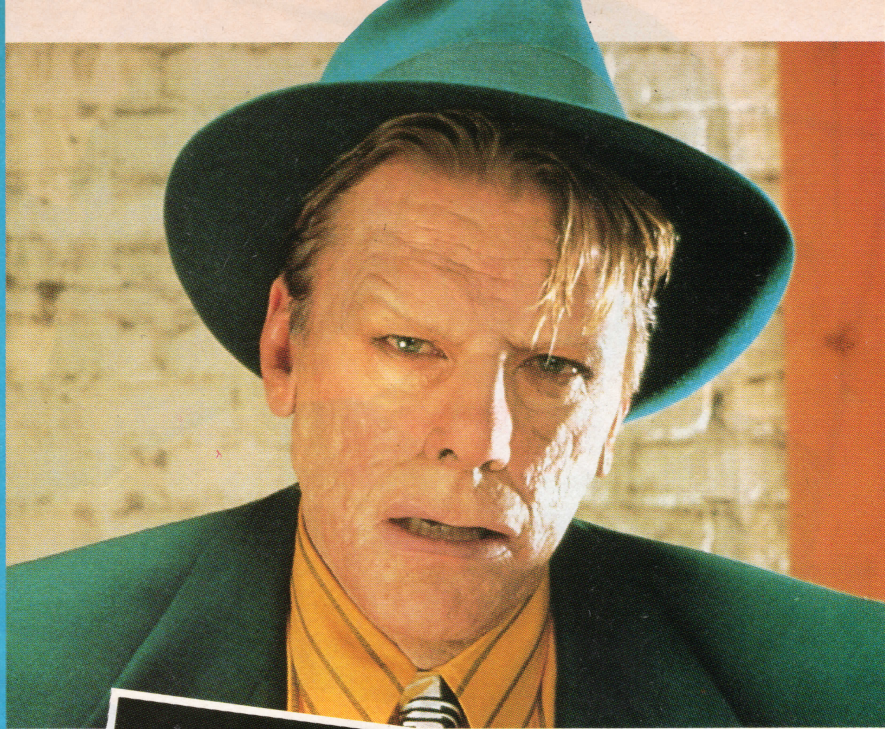

Academy Award winner Warren Beatty is legendary police detective Dick Tracy, the bravest, smartest and most popular crime-fighter ever, and the only man tough enough to take on gangster boss "Big Boy" Caprice, rumored to be played by Al Pacino (dressed in diabolical red), and his mob.

Moviegoers will have fun trying to spot the famous faces behind sinister characters such as Flattop, Pruneface, The Rodent and Itchy, all brought to life from the comic strip, and the plot becomes even more intriguing when another, more menacing demon, known only as The Blank, steps in to hunt down the two dictators of good (Tracy) and evil (Caprice) and take over the city.

Warren Beatty, who also produces and directs this adventure film, has surrounded himself with an impressive cast headlined by Madonna as Breathless Mahoney, Glenn Headley (Tess Trueheart) and Charles Durning (Police Chief Brandon).

Just who is behind those masks can be answered by the ingenious make-up wizards Doug Drexler and John Caglione Jr, but they're not telling either!

And, if curiosity isn't enough to have people running to the cinema, maybe a chance to see Beatty, 52, and his off-screen love Madonna, 31, in steamy scenes will make the trip worthwhile.

Madonna is already incorporating some of her musical numbers from the film, written by Broadway composer Stephen Sondheim, into a Dick Tracy tribute which makes up part of her own concert, now on the road.
